

Desert Wall

Upon the desert there comes a wall.
One side is desert, the other side desert.
Under the wall is desert.

Wall and desert – desert and wall.
In the wall is constructed a door.

There is still desert, there is still wall, and now
there is a door.
The desert is remains the same, as does the wall.

The door is an entrance, a passageway.
It offers mobility and maneuverability, an opening to experience the desert and the other side of the wall.

It is all desert, but by going through the opening one can expand their horizons.

The desert remains desert, the wall remains wall, the door remains the opening.

The individual's collective experience has been enhanced and expanded to include the other side.

-BARBARA LYNN